iRobot Prevails in Lawsuits Against Robotic FX

Company settles all disputes with former employee

BURLINGTON, Mass., Dec. 21, 2007 – iRobot Corp. (Nasdaq: IRBT) today announced that federal courts in Massachusetts and Alabama have entered judgments in favor of iRobot and all disputes with former employee Jameel Ahd and his company, Robotic FX, Inc., have been settled. In August, iRobot filed two lawsuits against Ahd and Robotic FX: the Alabama action was for patent infringement, and the Massachusetts action was for trade secret misappropriation.

In the patent infringement suit against Robotic FX for its Negotiator robot, the U.S. District Court for the District of Northern Alabama entered a judgment that Robotic FX knowingly infringed on both asserted patents. Similarly, the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts ruled that Ahd and Robotic FX misappropriated iRobot's proprietary and confidential information, violated fair trade practices and destroyed evidence. The Massachusetts court also made permanent an injunction that had been preliminarily ordered last month against the sale of products using certain iRobot trade secrets, including the Robotic FX Negotiator product.

"The judgments validate our strong intellectual property position and the value of our IP," said Helen Greiner, chairman of iRobot. "We are proud to deliver our reliable field-proven robots to aid our warfighters in their dangerous missions."

In a related settlement, Robotic FX will be dissolved and certain residual assets retained by iRobot at iRobot's election. Ahd is prohibited from participating in competitive activities in the robotics industry for five years.

iRobot's cumulative litigation and settlement-related expenditures associated with this dispute are expected to total approximately $2.9 million.
